CRITICAL INVESTMENT WARNING

BRCM (Broadcom Corp.) - DELISTED/ACQUIRED ENTITY

DO NOT INVEST - This company no longer exists as a publicly traded entity.

Key Facts:

- Status: Delisted/Acquired in 2015-2016
- Acquired by: Avago Technologies (now Broadcom Inc. - AVGO)
- Last SEC Filing: October 2015
- Trading Status: FALSE (not actively trading)
- Current Alternative: AVGO (Broadcom Inc.)

Critical Findings:

1. BRCM was acquired by Avago Technologies in a ~$37 billion transaction completed in early 2016
2. The company has not filed with the SEC since October 2015
3. Profile data shows "isActivelyTrading: false"
4. Any financial metrics shown are either 9+ years old or synthetic/corrupted
5. Mathematical impossibilities in data (negative Enterprise Value of -$952M)

Investment Implications:

- Investment Risk: 100% loss probability if attempting to trade
- Action Required: Do not attempt to purchase BRCM shares

- Alternative: For Broadcom exposure, analyze AVGO (Broadcom Inc.)

Why This Matters:

This case demonstrates the critical importance of verifying company status before conducting any investment analysis. The presence of a ticker symbol does not guarantee the company is actively trading. Always confirm: - Current trading status - Recent SEC filings (within 12 months) - No delisting or acquisition events

Recommendation:

Investors seeking exposure to Broadcom's semiconductor business should analyze AVGO (Broadcom Inc.), which is the current publicly traded entity resulting from the Avago-Broadcom merger.

Note: A full institutional research report cannot be generated for a delisted company. The data anomalies, lack of current filings, and confirmed inactive status make any traditional equity analysis impossible and potentially misleading.
